Beachgoers buy the books

BEACHGOERS have helped fund new books at a Boscombe primary school. Catering boss Rob Shearman donated one pence for every cup of tea and coffee served up at his nine seafront outlets.

The £1,000 raised will buy new books at King's Park primary school. Rob said: "I am pleased to have been able to support the school and would be delighted if other local businesses joined forces with us to make even more of a difference to good causes."

Next year Rob's Event Catering will be launching a competition for local primary schools to build a sculpture using recyclable products from their homes.

Rob said: "We want to help highlight the litter problems on the beach. If we can encourage youngsters to think about how we can recycle and why beaches need to be kept clean we will have achieved something worthwhile."
